Creativity and Endurance of Activities (30 points maximum) This criterion assesses the extent to which the activities used fresh, imaginative approaches AND the extent to which those activities laid a foundation. For example, activities to build coalitions, new senior advocacy organizations, or new processes for impacting policy-decision makers would rank higher than an appearance before a Board of Supervisors or City Council on a single issue.

C. Recognition (10 points maximum) This criterion assesses the extent to which the nominee has been recognized publicly for his/her accomplishments and advocacy activities.

D. Use of Community Resources (20 points maximum) This criterion assesses the extent to which the nominee utilizes available community resources and/or develops community resources to achieve task(s).
